PREFACE

THE objects and method of the Select Bibliography of Mediæval Economic History printed in the following pages need a few words of explanation. In the first place it should be explained that this undertaking had its origin in a mere academic discipline. In order to complete the equipment of the students of this department of the London School of Economics, it seemed desirable that special attention should be given to the sources and literature of Mediæval Economic History. It had been noticed that, in most cases, students showed a marked aversion from this branch of study; but apart from this needful exercise, there was no general Bibliography of the subject available for reference.

The present contribution is not meant to fill this void; but it may perhaps serve as a stepping-stone for other students. It is merely the outcome of a series of lectures on the theory of Historical Bibliography and the distribution of Historical Sources delivered several years ago. The practical aspect of these studies was subsequently discussed and investigated by a Seminar, in which the present work has been compiled, under many difficulties.

The leisure at the disposal of graduate students in London is not usually considerable, and a Seminar meeting once a week during the academic year might discuss ad infinitum the vexed questions arising out of the neglected studies of Historical Sources and Bibliography. Again, owing to various unavoidable causes, several members of the Seminar have been compelled to abandon their tasks, and new workers have had to be instructed. In course of time it became necessary, for academic reasons, to turn to other subjects of study and research before the work in hand was completed, and as it was already nearly two years in arrears the academic vacations have been utilised for the purpose of passing the Bibliography through the press.

As to the method of the work, it is desirable that the following explanations should be given :—

1. Under cover of the title, the niceties of bibliographical descriptions have been dispensed with in order to save space and to conform with the general use of "short titles" in modern classified lists of Historical Sources. The scientific aspects of Bibliography had already been studied as an academic discipline. In particular it may be noticed that the place of publication of English works is London, unless otherwise stated.

2. The chief object of the work being to assist future students of the School to prepare themselves for the serious study of the sources of Mediæval Economic History, some attention has been given to the "Instruments of Study," although this apparatus may appear tedious to bookmakers in search of specific titles.

3. For similar reasons, the original manuscript sources have been somewhat fully described, partly for the purpose of giving further information upon a very obscure subject and also to stimulate the use of the comparative study of Economic and Social conditions on the Continent during a period in which those conditions on both sides of the Channel were closely assimilated.

4. The latter motive has also induced the compilers to give occasional references in Part III of this Bibliography to the modern Continental literature of the subject. It will be evident that the selection made here is not exhaustive and is even arbitrary; but, apart from the exigencies of space, some difficulty was found in securing contributors to this part of the undertaking owing to professional and other occupations. It was originally intended to issue the portion dealing with the Continental sources and literature as a separate volume, but as time and materials were equally lacking for such an enterprise, it was decided to include the titles which had been collected, in the hope that they might facilitate the comparative studies referred to above. It will also be observed that the archives and other sources of Scottish, Irish, and Welsh history have been treated as distinct national interests in accordance with the general tendency of modern research.

5. The classification adopted here is in some respects an original one, inasmuch as it is based chiefly on the actual distribution of the Sources. In other respects it is more or less conventional, with some departures from the stereotyped arrangement of bibliographical sections. Archæological remains or exhibits have been briefly noticed as a means of supplementing the documentary sources.

6. It should be clearly understood that, for the reasons stated above, this Bibliography does not include titles of works published later than the year 1910, with a few exceptions.

The lecturer has to assume responsibility for some part of the classification, for the descriptive headings, and (as far as the time at his disposal permitted) for passing the work through the press.

The following members of the Seminar collaborated in the collection and selection of the titles: Miss A. B. Wallis Chapman, D.Sc. (Econ.); Miss Irene Churchill, Mod. Hist. Honours School, Oxford; Miss A. E. Conway, Mod. Hist. Tripos, Cambridge; Miss H. L. E. Garbett (Victoria Counties History); Miss M. Lane, M.A.; Miss G. R. Lewis; Miss M. F. Moore, M.A.; Miss E. E. le P. Power, Mod. Hist. Tripos, Cambridge; Miss Alice Raven (Victoria Counties History); Mr. H. G. Richardson, M.A., B.Sc. (Econ.), A. Zaleski, B.Sc. (Econ.).

Miss Moore has also compiled the Index, and Mr. Richardson has contributed some editorial matter.

The compilers have to acknowledge, with gratitude, the interest taken in their work by Miss Mactaggart, the Secretary of the School, and the assistance given to them by Mr. G. F. Barwick, of the British Museum, Mr. Hilary Jenkinson, M.A., F.S.A., of the Public Record Office, Mr. B. M. Headicar, Librarian of the School, and by the Printers.

- (e) Bibliographies of Special Branches of Mediæval History (Political, Constitutional, Legal, Ecclesiastical, Naval and Military, Economic and Social, and Local History).

Several extensive Bibliographies exist for such subjects as Ecclesiastical History (e.g., C. de Smedt, Introductio generalis ad historiam ecclesiasticam, etc., Ghent, 1876; E. Bratko, Wegweiser, etc., Gotha, 1890) and Law (E. Dramard, Bibliographie de la Bibliographie générale du Droit français et étranger), whilst for Local History, besides the important works of Ottino and Fumagalli (No. 328), Manzoni (Nos. 123-124), Gross (No. 121), Morris and Jordan (No. 125), almost every State, department, province, or county, now has its local bibliographer.¹

Again, the pages of historical writers like W. Möller (Lehrbuch der Kirchengeschichte), S. and B. Webb (No. 841), G. L. Gomme (No. 120), and G. Gavet (Sources des Institutions et du droit français) are rich in references to the literature of local history. For Political and Constitutional History, reference may be made to the selected Bibliographies cited in this work, supplemented by the lists of authorities appended to works like Lavissee (Histoire de France), the Political History of England. (Longmans), and the Cambridge Mediæval History. The bibliographies of Naval and Military History are chiefly concerned with a later period, and no special repertories exist for the subject of Economic and Social History, though a good list of authorities will be found in Cunningham's Growth of English Industry (No. 829), and useful references in Ashley's Studies and Reviews and various authorities cited in Part III. of this work. The Current Bibliography of the subject must be supplied from various journals devoted to the study of the several branches of History in question, as well as from the Jahresberichte (No. 99). For the study of Economic and Social History special reference may be made to the following periodicals, which are, however, chiefly concerned with a later period.

For particular works see above (B) (e) (Special Repertories) and (C) (a) (Auxiliary Studies). For the most part, however, the titles of works that are presumably of special value will be more conveniently obtained from the bibliographical lists appended to certain monographs. These are frequently published in the various "Academies." Under the modern conditions of historical study such isolated lists are of peculiar value. Division II.—INVENTORIES OF RECORDS AND STATE ARCHIVES.

As these instruments represent the means of access to texts of historical documents in an unpublished form, they are now rightly included in the scope of Historical Bibliography. Although differing widely in respect of form, method of construction, and terminology in the case of different nations, and even of different institutions, an inventory, list, index, calendar repertory, catalogue (or by whatever title it is known), whether in type or manuscript, whether detailed or summary, conveys some indication of the nature or value of individual MSS. that have not yet been calendared or printed in full.

A collective Catalogue of inventories for every country is at the present moment one of the great needs of historical students. Partial catalogues of this nature have been compiled for Europe (No. 196) and individual countries ; but the difficulty of posting frequent additions and alterations has hitherto proved insuperable. A few general remarks may be useful as to the condition of the archives of this and other countries.

ENGLAND.

The State Archives here are centralised to a degree exceeded only in the sister-kingdoms of Scotland and Ireland. An official Bibliography of Inventories is available in the shape of a List of Lists displayed in the Search Rooms (which is now posted up to date) and printed in the Deputy-Keeper's 24th (1862) and 41st (1879) Reports ; but useful information will be found in Scargill-Bird's Guide, and a catalogue of the Lists and Indexes and other Inventories on sale is issued by H.M. Stationery Office (No. 141). As to the above-mentioned official series of Lists and Indexes, see Athenæum, 6th August and 1st October, 1910. The titles of a few useful publications are given below :—

SCOTLAND.

Although no series of Inventories has been published in the official Reports of the Deputy-Keeper, an excellent Guide has been published and references to Scottish documents will be found in Scargill-Bird's Guide. Several ancient MS. inventories are preserved at the Register House, Edinburgh.

IRELAND.

Inventories have been printed in the Deputy-Keeper's Reports since 1869, but without any definite method. There is no official Guide, but references to the Irish documents in the Public Record Office will be found in Scargill-Bird's Guide, and some descriptions of individual records is given by J. T. Gilbert.

WALES.

The Welsh Records having been transferred to London, such inventories as exist will be found in the Reports of the Deputy-Keeper (Chester and Flint chiefly). A list of the Chester and Welsh Records is in the Press. Reference may also be made to the articles by R. A. Roberts (No. 167), H. Hall (No. 166), and E. A. Lewis, in *Transactions Royal Hist. FRANCE.

There is no complete or up-to-date Bibliography of the Archives Nationales in Paris or of the Archives Départementales in the Provinces. The literature of these archives is cited in the manuals of Langlois and Stein (No. 174), and Langlois (No. 91); also by E. Lelong in Répertoire Général du droit français (1889). Reference should also be made to H. Bordier's Les Archives de la France (1855).

In periodical literature valuable indications will be found in the Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes (No. 177), the Révue internationale des Archives (No. 180), and the Annuaire des Archives, etc. (1886, etc.). A report by L. Mirot on the inventories printed from 1888-1898 was published in 1899. The state of the inventories of the Departmental Archives is described in several works (Nos. 168-170). For the literature relating to French history in foreign Archives, reference should be made to the works of Bréquigny and Delpit and the Archives des Missions (1855 sq.)

In addition to the few select inventories given below, many others may be consulted by students as card catalogues ("en fiches"). The "Index Chronologique" of Teulet's work (No. 169) and the "Tableau" of the État Sommaire (No. 168) will be found useful.

For the literature of the Local Records (Archives Municipales, etc.) and Private Collections (Archives Diverses) and Libraries, see the works of Langlois and Langlois and Stein.

BELGIUM.

The Archives having received the same scientific attention as in France, the publication of inventories has not been neglected. Two official series have been constituted: (1) for the Archives du Royaume, (2) for the Dépôts in the Provinces. Several important Inventaires Sommaires have already appeared in both series. Besides these there are numerous earlier publications by L. P. Gachard and other archivists, which are described in the Archives de l'histoire de France (Langlois and Stein) as well as in the Bibliography of M. Pirenne (No. 113) and in the short notices of the Belgian archives by E. Laloire in the Annuaire de la Belgique scientifique, etc. (1907), and J. Cuvelier (Le Rôle des Archives, 1911).

An attempt was made to describe the provincial archives in L. P. Gachard's Table Synoptique (1876). Many useful descriptions will be found in the Revue des Bibliothèques et des Archives de Belgique (No. 189).

NETHERLANDS.

The best Guides to the Archives, Library, and other Collections of the Netherlands will be found in the Reports (Verlagen) of the old Rijks Archieven (1878, etc.); the Proceedings (Notulen) of the Society of Dutch Archivists (1890, etc.); the Journal (Nederlandsch Archievenblad) of the same Society (1891, etc.); and the Survey (Overzicht) of the various Inventories, etc., relating to the Dutch Archives. A useful conspectus of these Archives giving the state of the Inventories, etc., up to the year 1905, will be found in the Repertorium, edited by Major-General F. de Bas for the Krijgsgeschiedkundig Archief van den Generalen Staf, and also in the Tabellarisch Overzicht, appended to the Proceedings of the Congress of Dutch Archivists in 1898-1899.

No official report on the Dutch Archives has been published by the English Government. For the contents of Foreign Archives relating to the Netherlands, the official Reports of P. J. Blok, H. Brugmans, and others, refer almost exclusively to the post-mediæval period. Some valuable materials are described in the publications of the "Commission of Advice for national historical publications" (the Hague, 1894, etc.), and in the Bulletins of the Commission royale d'histoire.

GERMANY, AUSTRIA-HUNGARY, AND SWITZERLAND.

Comparatively few printed inventories have been published in these countries. Some assistance may be derived from the following works and periodicals: G. Holtzinger, Catechismus der Registratur und Archivkunde; F. von Löher, Archivlehre, and Burkhardt's Hand-und-Adress-Buch der Deutschen Archive (1887).

These works are, however, to some extent obsolete, and are now superseded by two brief but useful returns contained in F. Hettler's Archivalische Bibliographie (Halle, 1908) and the same author's Archivalischer Almanach (1910-11), and Adress-Buch der Wichtigsten historischen Archive Europas; works which, though unsystematic and incomplete, are of considerable service. Reference should also be made to the following periodicals: Archivalische Zeitschrift (1875, etc.), Mitteilungen des Instituts für oesterreichische geschichtsforschung, Zeitschrift für die Geschichte des Oberrheins, Mitteilungen der K. Preussischen Archivverwaltung the Mitteilungen der (Archiv) Sektion der K. K. Zentral-Kommission für Kunst, etc., in Wien.

There are a few Guides to the archives of individual states, e.g., Th. Ilger's Rheinisches Archiv.

The archives of Alsace-Lorraine are arranged and catalogued to a large extent on the French system.

Much information as to the Germanic archives can be obtained from the reports of foreign archive-missions.¹ An official series of Inventare Oesterreichischer Staatlicher Archive is now in course of publication at Vienna.

Attempts have been made, chiefly in Germany, to prepare a collective bibliography of Archive literature at least every ten years, and much has been done by the Congresses and professional periodicals of Archivists in this connection.

ITALY.

For the Vatican archives there is an extensive European literature as special researches have been published by several Governments and private agencies. See G. Brom, Guide aux Archives du Vatican (1910); the Reports, Transcripts and Calendars published by or preserved in the Public Record Office, London; and the Reports issued by French, Dutch, and American historical departments. No general inventory has yet been prepared.

The best current bibliography for the Italian State Archives (Archiviodi Stato) is to be found in periodicals like the Archivio Storico Italiano and the Rivista de Archivos, etc. (1871, etc.), the Archivio della Societa Romana di Storia patria, the Archivio Storico Lombardo, etc. There are many good inventories of State Archives, particularly that of Lucca (No. 214). For the Venetian and Milanese Archives the Calendars (Rolls Series) and Transcripts (Public Record Office) should be noted. Much information is also contained in the "Archives des Missions" of other nations. A fairly full bibliography of the Archivi di Stato is given in Hettler's Almanach (No. 196). Printed inventories exist for most of these collections. Several German and other foreign scholars have published descriptions of the Italian archives, though scarcely from an economic point of view.

PENINSULAR KINGDOMS (SPAIN AND PORTUGAL).

Inventories of the Spanish royal archives have only been partially printed, and chiefly in periodical publications, such as those mentioned below (Nos. 218-221). Reference may also be made to the following works : M. Alcubilla, Diccionario de Administracion española; R. Altamira, De Historia y Arte (1898) (No. 218). Descriptions of the Archives will also be found in the Archives des Missions (1865-1893), the Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes (1884-1890), and the Revue Internationale des Archives (1895-7). Other indications will be found in the proceedings of the Royal Academies and learned societies of both countries. There is a good printed description of the archives at Lisbon (No. 219), and some ancient inventories of the same collection.

Catalogues of many libraries, churches, academies, etc., which possess historical MSS. have been printed. Some of these have been described in foreign Guides. For Portugal, some valuable manuscripts exist in the Record Office and a catalogue, by F. F. Figanière, of Portuguese MSS. in the British Museum (1853) is well known. For the MSS. on both sides, see also V. M. Shillington, Commercial Relations between England and Portugal (Bibliography) (2066).

SCANDINAVIAN KINGDOMS (DENMARK, NORWAY, SWEDEN).

These countries have been chiefly concerned with their own national histories, and, therefore, descriptions of their archives are found in native works, chiefly of a periodical character. These include, for Denmark, the Meddelelser fra det danske Rigsarkiv (1906, etc.); for Norway, the Meddelelser fra det Norske Rigsarchiv (1870-1903); for Sweden, the Meddelanden från svenska Riksarkivet (1877, etc.). Other accounts will, however, be found in German and other foreign journals dealing with archive subjects, though these are mostly for the post-mediæval period, and the same remark applies to the Reports on Danish and Swedish archives in the Deputy-Keeper's 43rd and 45th Reports.

Division III.—INVENTORIES OF LOCAL RECORDS, PROVINCIAL ARCHIVES AND OTHER MUNI-
MENTS; CATALOGUES OF LIBRARIES AND PRIVATE COLLECTIONS OF MSS.

In England, as abroad, no sharp distinction is made in the production of inventories of State archives by official or private enterprise. Similarly, inventories of local records or archives and catalogues of libraries and collections are everywhere produced by official or private agencies. By degrees, however, the practice of dealing with records or archives by official methods is becoming fixed. At the same time the archivist is still in request for compiling lists or catalogues of private collections. It is to be noted, however, that abroad the official influence of the various Commissions for publications is more far-reaching than that of our own Historical Manuscript Commission. Again, the respective conditions differ in another way—that is to say, we in England find practically all the local muniments and family papers still in the possession of ecclesiastical and other corporations or of individuals, whereas abroad a very large proportion of these local documents has reverted or is being handed over (like the Notarial Archives) to the State for preservation in provincial archives. Therefore we must have recourse to the official inventories of these archives.

Again, it should be noted that in England besides the publications of archives or commissions, many inventories have been prepared by the private enterprise of various corporations, learned societies, and private owners or collectors, and that, owing to the unfortunate instability of many private collections, the Catalogues of Sales should not be neglected as a source of information.

By careful examination and analysis much information may be derived from the Reports of the Historical Manuscripts Commission (Index in 17th Report), Hardy's Catalogue (No. 255), the Report of the Committee on Local Records (1902), and the Guide to the Victoria County History.

The Catalogues of the great libraries are incomplete, and there is a general lack of co-ordination between official and private sources. The "Class Catalogue," placed in the Manuscript Department of the British Museum (as in other libraries, especially abroad) will be indispensable ; so also will be such Guides as Mr. Gray's recent Index to the Cole MSS. in the British Museum.

To some extent information as to the inventories or catalogues is afforded by Historical Bibliographies, like that of C. Gross (No. 84). In a few cases, several catalogues have been compiled for a single locality. Finally, assistance may be obtained from the published researches of local antiquaries or historical students.

In the case of the Sister-Kingdoms we receive far less help from recognised sources of information. For Scotland, there is Gross's Bibliography of Municipal History (No. 121) and Professor Sandford Terry's valuable inventory of the publications of the Scottish Historical Clubs (No. 85) and the same writer's Index to Papers relating to Scotland in the Reports of the Historical Manuscripts Commission (No 86). The Report of the Committee on Local Records (1902) is also of considerable value for this subject. For Irish local records and MSS. the same Report is available, and to this may be added the Reports of the Historical Manuscripts Commission and such works as O'Curry's Manuscript Materials of Irish History (No. 299).

Wales, unfortunate in the matter of the national records, has fared better in respect of the description of literary manuscripts, with such works as J. G. Evans's Reports on Welsh MSS. (for the Historical MSS. Commission), and E. Owen's Catalogue of Welsh MSS. in the British Museum (No. 300).

In respect of Foreign sources derived from municipal or communal archives and private collections there is some disparity between the materials available in the case of certain States. At the same time, in such well-equipped countries as France, Belgium, Holland, etc., there is a considerable descriptive literature for these unofficial archives as well as many printed inventories. Moreover, whereas in England it is still the exception to find such collections adequately arranged and catalogued by means of a manuscript list of titles, such elementary dispositions are practically universal in all other large States. The literature above mentioned is too extensive for detailed notice here, but reference may be made to such works as Langlois and Stein (op. cit.), and Molinier, Sources de l'Histoire de France. At the same time it should be noted that the distinction between "Archives" and "Libraries" in these countries is a rather fine one, and, therefore, reference should be made to both headings of the present work. Finally, some assistance is rendered in respect of methods of research, by handbooks or essays, such as Langlois and Seignobos (No. 363), and Guides to the sources such as Oesterley's Wegweiser (No. 322).

It should be noted that, in many cases, an ambitious Calendar takes the place of the humble but more useful list, as in the case of several of the descriptions of municipal records. Special compilations, such as a List of Cartularies (No. 281), are of great value.

In respect of the following titles of lists or catalogues of Local Records, etc., it must be clearly understood that these are only given as specimens, and that the selection made is not in any way exhaustive.

Division IV.—CATALOGUES OF MUSEUMS.

It is now admitted that the sources of History include Monuments and other archaic objects as well as Documents, and for the study of the industrial arts the former class of evidence is of especial interest. Unfortunately, however, little use has hitherto been made of such sources by historical students, while the sources in question are generally deficient for the mediæval period from the point of view of economic historical study. On the other hand, Catalogues of Museums are better arranged and more generally accessible in a printed form than is the case in respect of inventories of MSS., and it would seem to be very desirable that in future they should receive due recognition among the instruments of historical study. In addition to the several catalogues of the British Museum, the Victoria and Albert Museum, and other public institutions in London or provincial towns, there are valuable collections in the possession of a few local societies and individuals. Abroad, the Museum plays a more important part in the historical education of the nation, and such institutions as may be seen in Paris, Barcelona, Nuremburg, and Brussels (amongst others) are of great importance for mediæval economic study.

There is no collective catalogue of the catalogues of the Museums of Europe, but much information will be found in the Revue Internationale des Musées (1895-1896), and reference may be made to individual catalogues, like those of the British Museum. Many civic museums contain MSS. and even archives.

II. LINGUISTIC AND NOMENCLATURE.

It has not been thought necessary to include references to works dealing with the grammar and structure of mediæval languages. To the student who has a fair knowledge of classical Latin, mediæval texts in that language will present few difficulties (apart from those arising from the corruption or natural obscurity of the text) which cannot be solved by reference to Du Cange or some other glossary. For Old French the student may be referred to one of the numerous introductory works to that language; a convenient one in English is A Primer of Old French, by G. H. Clarke and C. J. Murray. For fuller information than will be found in an introductory work, reference may be made to the Grammaires historiques of A. Darmesteter (transl. G. A. Hartog) and K. Nyrop. There is no work, large or small, dealing adequately with Anglo-French considered apart from Old French ; but the former language does not present such marked differences as to render this of any particular inconvenience to the historical student, although a good glossary is much to be desired. For works dealing with Anglo-French, reference may be made to the excellent chapters treating of that language in Skeat's Principles of English Etymology, Second Series ; to the unfinished work by L. E. Menger, The Anglo-Norman Dialect, and to Maitland's Introduction to Vol. I. of the Year Books of Edward II, which has been reprinted in the Cambridge History of English Literature, Vol. I., ch. xx. Many works of all sizes have been written on Old and Middle English: for the English student convenient introductions to Old English are the Anglo-Saxon Primer and Readers of Sweet, and, to Middle English Morris and Skeat's Specimens, or O. E. Emerson's Reader ; as regards more advanced treatises it will be sufficient to refer to other works of Sweet and Skeat, and those of Morsbach and Sievers.

The number of glossaries of mediæval languages is constantly increasing with the number of newly edited texts. It is clearly impossible to attempt to give a list of them in the present work, but particular reference may be made to those appended to Skeat's edition of Piers Plowman and the works of Chaucer and G. C. Macaulay's edition of the works of Gower (Latin, French, and English).

PART II.—THE SOURCES OF MEDIÆVAL ECONOMIC HISTORY.

SECTION I.—ENGLAND.

DIVISION I.—PUBLIC RECORDS.

Down to the middle of the Victorian period the English Records and State Papers were chiefly consulted for legal, topographical or genealogical purposes. Even in the present day this aspect of the archives is more conspicuous than that of historical or archæological research. At the same time, though the historical student and the antiquary are much in evidence in the modern archives (owing to the new facilities for investigation suggested by the official series of Calendars and Indexes), the study of economic sources has perhaps been pursued with less assiduity than that of the political and constitutional documents.

The value of the archives as materials for mediæval Economic History is, however, very great, while the extent of these materials is almost incalculable. They include not only many classes of the mediæval records, but also numerous specimens of manorial muniments which have come into the custody of the Crown. Although they have been freely used by economic historians, these materials are still in need of further identification as a necessary preliminary to a complete description, which is more urgently needed than a casual and piece-meal publication of the sources.

The difficulty of making an economic survey of the records is largely due to the artificial plan of their classification. Moreover, while their economic interest is recognised in the few record texts already published, it is practically ignored in the Indexes to the official Calendars and Lists. It becomes necessary, therefore, to concentrate our attention upon certain types of records which are obviously of economic interest. For the purpose of identifying the documents of which we are in search we may utilise a plan of classification whereby the scattered types of official instruments that recur in the records of the ancient courts, together with the membra disjecta known as "Miscellanea" or "Various" or "Special Collections," are brought together in the several forms of Charters, Inquisitions, Accounts, or Pleadings.

It must be remembered that the various Diplomatic Documents and Ministerial or Judicial Proceedings included in this structural classification will be found distributed throughout the Courts of Chancery, Exchequer, King's Bench and Common Pleas, with their several departments, as well as throughout the special or abolished jurisdictions such as the Palatine, Admiralty, and Palace Courts; and each of these collections will be consulted in turn as a matter of course. Further, it is suggested that a careful observation of the outward form of the documents is useful for the purpose of identification. The records will be found to take the shape of rolls, books, and loose membranes or pieces of parchment, which usually denote the character of enrolments or originals respectively. The relationship between these forms is of considerable interest, and a careful observation of this general disposition will enable the student to avoid duplication or to supply defects in a particular series. It will also enable him to supplement the final Record by intermediate forms containing fuller details.

It has been already mentioned that this scheme of structural classification has been utilised here for both published and unpublished records. It must be observed, however, that the scope of this work does not permit of the enumeration of individual Record publications in the shape of texts, calendars, and lists or indexes, even if these were in all cases useful for the present purpose. Moreover, a list of serial publications is given in an Appendix. It may also be remarked that, besides the complete or partial editions noted or referred to below, many important extracts or abstracts of documents have been cited in modern works like those of Seebohm, Vinogradoff, Pollock and Maitland, Round, etc. (See below, Part III.) It should be noted further that in the official publications of the Record Commission and Rolls Series, the titles List, Index, and Calendar are used interchangeably.

A.—DIPLOMATIC DOCUMENTS.

I.—OFFICIAL INSTRUMENTS.

(a) Royal Charters and Confirmations.

The originals of the Anglo-Saxon charters (which include many vernacular Writs and Wills, etc.) are not now in official custody. (See below, Division II.) The same remark applies to most of the registers or cartularies containing later copies. Some later enrolments, however, are found in the Chancery Rolls, though these have rarely been used in the printed editions cited below (Nos. 1074 seq. passim). Several charters that are not included in the printed editions will be found in the collections of facsimiles published by the Ordnance Office and British Museum. For modern works indicating the economic value of these charters, see Nos. 1873, etc. In general, they supply information with regard to the distribution and tenures of land, and to franchises and privileges, such as exemption from taxation, with incidental notices of the agrarian economy.

Comparatively few original charters of the Anglo-Norman period have survived in official custody, and these will be found amongst the Records of the Duchy of Lancaster and the Special Collection of "Ancient Deeds." The charters of Henry II. have been recently described by M. L. Delisle (Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, t. 67), and a Codex Diplomaticus for the whole period (including the continental issues), is in preparation by Mr. C. W. Davis and Prof. C. Haskins. Special reference may be made to the notes of Nos. 852 and 1381. Occasionally Anglo-Norman charters are found enrolled in Chancery Rolls of a later date (Rotuli Chartarum [ed. Hardy] and the Calendars of Patent Rolls); but a still larger number are entered in private cartularies (see below, Section II.). Many of these charters are really writs. In point of economic interest, these charters illustrate the devolution of feudal tenures and the evolution of constitutional liberties, such as freedom of trade. They also elucidate the position of the Forests and of the Church Lands.

The originals of what may be called Conventional Charters (1200-1485) are only found amongst the miscellaneous documents casually deposited in the Archives (Ancient Deeds and Original Letters Patent). A regular series of enrolments is preserved in the Chancery Rolls, and a certain number are entered in official precedent books. As these charters were chiefly issued in connection with grants of Markets, Fairs, Warrens, Fee farms, and other fiscal concessions, their economic interest is well defined. During the greater part of this period, however, grants made by Letters Patent usurped many of the functions of earlier Royal Charters. The bibliography of this section is extensive, but is chiefly based upon muniments preserved in private collections. For publications, see below, Nos. 852, sq.

Very few Royal Confirmations exist for the Anglo-Saxon period, and those for the Anglo-Norman period are not easily distinguishable from original charters. From 1225 onwards Confirmations by Inspeximus are enrolled indiscriminately in the Charter and Patent Rolls, and a regular series of Confirmation Rolls begins only in 1483.

Apart from the question of their general authenticity, the Confirmations are of considerable economic interest. For a further description, see Nos. 856 and 860.

(b) Writs and Letters under the Great Seal.

The Writs in question, as far as they are of economic interest, are usually included amongst the Royal Charters of the Anglo-Saxon and Anglo-Norman periods (10th to 12th centuries). The later legal type (Original and Judicial Writs) does not concern us here.

The Letters referred to in the title are Writs of an epistolary character which also show a close assimilation to Royal Charters. The varied interest of the Letters Patent and Close has been frequently described (Nos. 868, 870, 884), and their economic value will be apparent from the printed Calendars (Nos. 889, 896). Besides the above, other instruments, relating to Passage and Exchange, etc., which were formerly classed under separate titles, are now regarded as Supplementary Patent and Close Rolls. With them are included the Treaty Rolls, better known as Gascon, French, Norman, Almain, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh Rolls. The remaining series of Chancery Rolls, which are still separately classified, like the Fine and Redisseisin Rolls, etc., may be regarded as departmental memoranda, and the same remark applies to the Originalia Rolls of the Exchequer which contain copies or abstracts of Royal Grants. Letters Patent or certificates might be issued by certain Departmental Officers, and amongst these Customers' "Cokets" and Wardrobe "Debentures" are of economic interest. The above series of Chancery enrolments may be supplemented in a few particular instances by the "Original Letters Patent" above referred to, and also by Entry Books such as the Libri Munimentorum; but on the whole it is remarkably complete. The Bibliography of this section is also extensive, but the economic aspect has been somewhat neglected. In particular, a separate subject-index to the Rolls Series of mediæval Calendars is needed, whilst the interesting "Treaty," Exchange, Passage, Liberate, Fine, Protection, Staple, and Scutage Rolls are still (1910) for the most part uncalendared.

(c) Writs and Letters under the Smaller Seals (Privy Seal and Signet) or Sign Manual, Epistolary and Notarial Documents.

Instruments under the Smaller Seals should properly be distinguished, according to their purport, as royal missives, or as departmental warrants for procuring the Great Seal. No such division is, however, observed in the official classification, and the bulk of the instruments referred to will be found in three extensive series of "Warrants" in the Chancery, Treasury of Receipt, and Exchequer of Receipt collections. These are the originals or rescripts that were filed, no system of enrolment or entry having apparently been practised in the Seal offices, though many instruments were entered in the Exchequer Memoranda Rolls, etc. Amongst the missives are certain letters relating to "Benevolences," and amongst the departmental warrants are files representing the activities of the Household Officers in the fifteenth century. Not only, however, is the arrangement of the documents in this section incomplete, but their bibliography is practically a blank. No printed lists or calendars exist, and the specimens that have been published in the Rolls Series (Nos. 912-916), and by M. Déprez (No. 900), are chiefly of political interest. Some that relate to fiscal matters will be found in the footnotes of Madox's History of the Exchequer, and others are printed in the Formula Book (No. 870).

A large collection of original Papal Bulls and treaties with foreign states and other Diplomatic Documents was carefully preserved in the Treasury of the Receipt (Exchequer), and another collection was preserved amongst the Chancery Records. These documents were also occasionally enrolled, and a large number are entered in the Libri Munimentorum. The Treaty Papers are chiefly notarial instruments. Many of these, together with Papal Bulls, have been printed in the Foedera by the Record Commission (Nos. 907-908), but no complete collection of diplomatic documents illustrating the commercial relations between this country and the mediæval continental states has been published. Lists of these will be found in old Reports of the Deputy-Keeper, and those enrolled in the Chancery are calendared (Nos. 889, 896). They have been more carefully described by continental scholars (Gross, Nos. 2117-2121, 2123-24).

For the Papal Bulls the well-known register of Jaffé-Potthast is available (Nos. 1607, 1608), and for instruments preserved or registered abroad various calendars and texts may be consulted (Nos. 1604, 1625).

A large collection of royal and private letters is still preserved under the head of Ancient Correspondence (Chancery). Although the official list (No. 153) is somewhat meagre, it will assist students in discovering subjects of economic interest. The same remark will apply to the list of Ancient Petitions (ibid.), which may be regarded as epistolary instruments. The same remark will apply to certificates and other returns. Instances will be found in the case of the returns to the Inquisitions of Knights' Fees, in the Red and Black Books of the Exchequer and Testa de Nevill, as well as in the Chancery Files. At the same time, the returns to royal writs of inquisitions, etc., can be more conveniently considered under the heads of Ministerial and Judicial Proceedings.

More than one series of Royal Letters has been published from various sources ; but these are of less economic value than the private correspondence of merchants and other subjects (No. 899).

The above Diplomatic types are found in the shape either of originals under seal, or of entries in cartularies and other register books. These again may be conveniently distinguished by their provenance (as indicated above), and in each case the economic information may be recognised under such subject headings as Pensions, Tithes, Feudal Service, Fisheries, Buildings, Agrarian, and Domestic Economy, and many others which have been briefly indicated in particular instances.

II.—SEMI-OFFICIAL INSTRUMENTS AND PRIVATE INSTRUMENTS DEPOSITED IN ARCHIVES.

These include various private Conveyances or Contracts such as Deeds-poll, Indentures, Leases, Quit-claims, Pensions, Recognisances, Bonds, Assignments, Certificates, etc., which have been enrolled or entered in official records, either by way of remembrance of the interests of the Crown or as a matter of privilege and favour to royal officials. They do not include the regular series of Fines. A large number of instruments relating to the financial transactions of Edward I. are entered in the Red Book of the Exchequer, the Libri Munimentorum, and other Books of Remembrance. Similar transactions are referred to in the Chancery enrolments (above A. 1.). Official recognizances are chiefly entered in the Exchequer Memoranda Rolls. Some official Indentures are also entered in the Libri Memorandorum. The original instruments will, in many cases, be found amongst the "Ancient Deeds," Exchequer Proceedings, Original Letters Patent, and other "Special Collections," as well as in the Miscellaneous Rolls and Books and the Miscellanea of the several classes of Records. Some of these documents, like Indentures of War, are mixed with the Exchequer Accounts. The certificates under the Statute of Merchants and Statute Staple (Series I.) are of especial interest. The value of these semi-official instruments is considerable in connection with fiscal history. Their bibliography, however, is disappointing, except in respect of Jewish "Starrs." Specimens are printed in the Formula Book (No. 921).

The private instruments deposited in archives form a large and miscellaneous class of documents which differs from the preceding in not being enrolled, during the mediæval period, or entered in Books of Remembrance, though a considerable number are entered in Cartularies now preserved in the Record Office, while a few specimens may be found in precedent books. It follows, therefore, that these are original instruments which have been casually acquired in the course of litigation, or through the feudal intervention of the Crown. They include various forms of conveyances, contracts and certificates, such as Feoffments, Confirmations, Demises, Mortgages, Wills, Manumissions, Exchanges, Partitions, Rent-charges, Pensions and Corrodies, Quit-claims, Concords, Uses, Bonds, Indentures, Letters of Attorney, Assignments, Acquittances, etc. Their economic interest is considerable, and some progress has been made in the description of the several series under which they have been arranged through the well-known "Calendar of Ancient Deeds" (No. 923). A distinct series connected with the Greenwich Hospital Department of the Admiralty is described in a manuscript list. Reference should again be made to the official Guide under the heading "Deeds."

B.—MINISTERIAL PROCEEDINGS.

(a) Royal Surveys, Inquisitions, and Assessments.

Of these the Surveys may be regarded either as returns to special processes of the Chancery or Exchequer, or as ordinary manorial extents preserved in official custody. In either case they are chiefly concerned with the agrarian economy of manors or lands.

The Inquisitions may be conveniently distinguished (see Formula Book, Pt. 2, Table of Contents) as Fiscal and Feudal respectively. The former, which are not all preserved in official custody, include the well-known Hidage and Carucage assessments of the 11th and 12th centuries. Most of these have been exhaustively described and printed ; but some obscurity still exists with regard to local assessments. The latter are of institutional rather than of agrarian interest, and some closely resemble Royal Accounts in their general form. These Inquisitions are preserved either in the form of original returns filed with the writs of Inquisition, or as copies of the same entered in official registers, as in the case of Domesday with its satellites and many of the great inquests of the 12th and 13th centuries (Nos. 927, sq.). In a few cases the official entries are made up in the form of rolls. In some instances fragments of the original returns have survived. These are always instructive, and they are often valuable in respect of details which are not given in the official registers. Assessments are frequently regarded as Revenue Accounts, which they closely resemble in form. They may be distinguished, however, by the raison d'être of their compilation, being returns to a writ or order which influences the form of composition, as in the well-known cases of the Inquisitiones Nonarum, the Taxatio Ecclesiastica, the Valor Ecclesiasticus, and Parliamentary Subsidies. References to the above types of records will be found in the official Guide under the headings "Accounts," "Subsidies," etc.

Most of the existing MSS. of the so-called "satellites of Domesday Book," as well as copies or excerpts from other royal inquisitions, are preserved in public libraries or private collections. Many specialised editions of royal surveys and inquisitions for particular counties will be found in the Transactions of local societies (Nos. 927, sq.). For a detailed bibliography see Davenport, pp. vii.-xi. and 18-29, Moore, Bibliographies (No. 138), and Gross, sections 50 (a and b), 55, 56 (b), 57; but a very large number of "Ancient Extents," preserved amongst the Public Records, is still unpublished. Inventories and indexes of the Inquisitions, Post Mortem, Ad quod Damnum, etc., have been produced by the Record Commissioners and the Master of the Rolls.

(b) Royal Accounts.

Although this class of documents is apparently homogeneous in character, considerable difficulty is sometimes experienced in distinguishing between

- Accounts and Surveys, or even Inquisitions and Assessments. Again, it will be found that in the case of Accounts a considerable difference exists in point of detail between the originals and the official abstracts which usually take the form of enrolments instead of entry books. The original Accounts, like the original Inquisitions, are now preserved in a fragmentary condition, and the most perfect series is contained in the enrolments. Although the great majority of both series has been preserved in the Exchequer, isolated specimens may be found in the records of the Chancery and other Courts. References to Accounts appear in the official Guide under that heading. The bibliography in relation to the bulk of this class is meagre compared with that of the preceding class. It includes extracts from the Pipe Rolls, the Book of Aids, Poll Taxes and Subsidies, etc., printed in antiquarian journals, etc. For details, see Gross, section 50 c-f, h, Davenport pp. x. and 14-15, and Moore, op. cit. Index, s.v. "Subsidies."

C.—JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

As a series the pleadings of the Courts of Law throw considerable light upon such matters of economic interest as manorial tenures and customs, the status of villeins and labourers, the distribution of land, commercial intercourse, and the custom of merchants, the royal revenue and control of trade, etc. In view of their vast bulk, however, and the scanty provision of lists, calendars or texts as yet existing, these main series of records of the Courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas, Exchequer, and Chancery, are perhaps of less importance than the subsidiary documents or the special inquisitions, which can only be distinguished from ministerial proceedings by their judicial character. Many of these inquisitions are incorporated with the pleadings in question, whilst others are separately filed as returns to writs of inquisition. Their relationships have been described in the Formula Book (Pt. 2), where also specimens of the various types are printed. In addition to the pleadings in the King's Courts and the Placita in Cancellaria (which include many cases under the law merchant), the proceedings of the Council and Parliament may be included here, whilst the records of independent jurisdictions such as the Palatinate or Duchy Courts, the Marshalsea and Palace Court, the Forest Courts, the pleas of the Exchequer of the Jews and of the Admiralty Courts, are deserving of close attention. Many records of cases and excerpts from Plea Rolls, Feet of Fines, etc., have been published in the transactions of local societies. The judicial proceedings to which reference is made above will be found described in considerable detail in the official Guide. The bibliography of this division is imposing, though by no means commensurate with the bulk of the surviving records. Details are given by C. Gross, sections 51 and 52, and the construction of these records is discussed in the Formula Book (Pt. 2).

D.—MISCELLANEOUS RECORDS.

Although this heading should properly be given, for the purpose of including many documents which are not of official origin, such as those that have been confiscated by the Crown, or deposited and not reclaimed by suitors, it would be found, in fact, that the greater number of such documents have now been incorporated in cognate official series, and therefore a distinction of this sort is scarcely required in practice. It should be remembered, however, that there are a large number of composite records, such as precedent books, containing specimens of Diplomatic, Ministerial, and Judicial records intermixed, but very few of these "Miscellaneous Books" have been either published in full or calendared.

For lists of these, see the Guide, s.v. "Registers and Books of Remembrance," and "Miscellaneous Books" (Exchequer).

Div. II.—LOCAL RECORDS AND LITERARY MSS.

A sharp distinction has usually been made in this country between public and private archives, but there has recently been a tendency (emphasised in the Treasury Report on Local Records, 1902) to regard many of the latter as documents of a semi-public nature. Again, the collections vested in certain trustees and corporations, such as those administering the libraries of the British Museum and the great Universities, may be regarded as practically open to the public, whilst some other corporate bodies, institutions, and learned societies give reasonable facilities of access. The exceptions to this practice are, however, numerous, and include, moreover, the bulk of the private collections which are of the greatest importance to the student of Economic History. Again, some notable collections, containing public documents appropriated by former officials, have been dispersed and portions sold to foreign purchasers.

It has been the practice of bibliographers to classify and describe all the above sources pari passu with the Public Records. The objection to this plan, apart from its unscientific character, is that the student is not assisted thereby to realise either the provenance of the sources or their present location. These are points of much importance for the purpose of enabling the student to trace scattered documents or to make the necessary dispositions for obtaining access to the collections.

The following classification will perhaps be found useful as a key to the general distribution of the sources.

1. Documents in the custody of "public" museums or libraries and learned societies (chiefly anti-quarian).
2. Documents in the custody of "private" corporations (ecclesiastical, legal, municipal, trading).
3. Documents in the custody of private individuals.

In respect of the above collections it may be noticed that class 1 comprises the so-called "made collections," in distinction to the inherited muniments or cognate MSS. in the possession of class 2, whilst class 3 includes collections of both types. It may also be observed that certain "Local Records" are actually public records under the Act of 1838¹; but although many of these collections contain State documents which have been formerly removed from the archives, very few mediæval records have been thus abstracted.

In another aspect these Local Records may be broadly classified for economic purposes as comprising manorial, agrarian, municipal, and statistical documents, besides many which may be recognised as counterparts or subsidiary processes of official records. In view of the great diversity of the contents of local repositories, a precise and scientific classification will be found even more valuable than in the case of the State Archives. This will also serve to explain the relationship between certain types which occur equally in official and private collections. The details of this classification will be found below, and it only remains to add that the "instruments of study," in the shape of lists, indexes and calendars, are noticeably deficient. Exceptions must be made in the case of class 1 above referred to whilst the remaining classes have during the last generation been rendered more accessible by the enterprise of certain private corporations and individual owners, as well as through the activities of the Historical Manuscripts Commission (cf. Trans. R. Hist. Soc., 3rd Ser, IV.). Unfortunately, however, many careful inventories of local records remain unprinted or unpublished, and the bibliographical indications are thus obscure. A key to the Historical MSS. Commission is published in the Seventeenth Report, and the returns printed in the Report on

Local Records (Appendix 3, Query 8) will be found invaluable. In respect of published texts, the provision made by various agencies, though considerable, is very unevenly distributed. Some useful references will be found in the bibliographies of Gross, Davenport and Moore. The "select list" printed below has been rigorously curtailed by the exigencies of space.

A.—DIPLOMATIC DOCUMENTS.

(a) Charters, Letters Patent, and other Royal Instruments.

These are the originals of instruments enrolled in the archives. A still larger number, however, are preserved in cartularies, registers, etc. Like the succeeding class, they are usually carefully listed, and have been extensively printed. For practical purposes however, they cannot be distinguished from the following class, and specimens of each type of instrument will be found below.

Collections of charters printed by private persons are so numerous that only a few specimens can be given here (Nos. 1100, sq.). These have been selected as examples of collections covering either an extensive area or a long period, or affecting important institutions. Various charters of much economic interest will be found in the Publications of the Record Commission and the Rolls Series. Dugdale's Monasticon contains many important diplomata, and many charters both of towns and of religious houses have been printed by the Historical Manuscripts Commission. Examples of English societies publishing diplomata of economic interest are included:—

- 1100. Anglo-Saxon Manuscripts, Facsimiles of, Ordnance Survey. 1878-1884.

(b) Deeds, Wills, and other Private Instruments.

These documents are very numerous in private collections, and, like the preceding class, they are widely distributed. But since their value was not as great as that of the Royal Charters, they have not been entered as systematically as the latter. They should be carefully compared with the series in official custody (Nos. 852 sq.), and, like the preceding division, they are extensively represented in the Reports of the Historical Manuscripts Commission. Special mention may be made here of the two following classes of documents:—

Episcopal Registers.—The contents of these entry books are of great economic interest, as they include notices of markets, bridges, tenures, tithes, common rights, usury, etc. In some cases the financial transactions of the bishop with foreign merchants are recorded. As a source of information these Registers have been hitherto strangely neglected, but great progress has been made with their publication during the last few years. Certain notable registers had already been printed, and now the work begun by local enterprise is being carried on in a systematic manner by the Canterbury and York Society (Carlisle, Hereford, Lincoln, London). The Local Societies above referred to have been mentioned elsewhere. They include the Somerset Record Society (Bath and Wells), the Hampshire Record Society (Winchester), the Worcestershire Historical Society (Worcester), the Surtees Society (York, Durham), the Sussex Record Society (Chichester), besides a few publications in the Rolls Series (Durham, York, and Carlisle), or by private enterprise.

1144. Lincoln, Liber Antiquus de ordinationibus Vicariarum tempore Hugonis Wells, 1209-35 (A. Gibbons). Lincoln, 1888.

Wills.—A considerable number of Anglo-Saxon Wills will be found in Kemble and Thorpe, but few wills have survived between the end of the 11th and the early part of the 14th century. Most of the latter have been printed, e.g., by the Camden Society (Bury St. Edmunds), Surtees Society (Durham, ed. J. Raine; North Country Wills, ed. J. W. Clay; York, ed. Raine and Richmond), Somerset Record Society (ed. F. W. Weaver), Lancs. and Cheshire Historical Society (ed. W. F. Irvine), the Cumberland and Westmoreland Antiquarian, etc., Society (ed. R. S. Ferguson), the Early English Text Society (ed. F. J. Furnivall), the Kent Archæological Society (ed. L. L. Duncan and A. Hussey), and the London Corporation (ed. R. R. Sharpe). Besides these, several volumes have been published by private enterprise (Nos. 1145-7).

1145. Collection of the Wills of the Kings and Queens of England, Princes and Princesses of Wales, etc., from William I. to Henry VII. (J. Nichols). 1780.

1146. Early Lincoln Wills (abstracted from the Episcopal Registers), 1280-1547 (A. Gibbons). Lincoln, 1888.
1147. Testamenta Vetusta. From the reign of Henry II. (N. H. Nicolas). 1826.
- (c) Letters. For collections of letters, both official and unofficial. See Division I, A (1) (C) and Nos. 899 sq.

B. MINISTERIAL PROCEEDINGS.

This class contains Manorial Surveys, Inventories, Accounts, Extents, Rentals and Custumals cognate to the official series. Some of these are also entered in registers or precedent books. With these are included several surveys analogous to Domesday Book.

Miss Davenport's bibliography, supplemented by that of Miss Moore (No. 138), is the best authority for this group, but many references will be found in Prof. Gross's section on "Local Records" and "Town Records," and the publications of the Selden Society, together with the Reports of the Historical Manuscripts Commission, and the invaluable collection of MM. Mély and Bishop (No. 136). A separate list of Churchwardens' Accounts is appended.

C.—JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

Although this section only faintly corresponds with that comprising the Records of the King's Courts, many transcripts or reports of legal proceedings and original treatises are preserved in private collections. These also include many original or unique records and versions of early laws and ordinances, besides a large and important series of local municipal ordinances. The great bulk, however, of the Court Rolls in private custody relate to the routine procedure of the manorial courts. The bibliography of these muniments is practically in the same state as that of the former section, except that further information may be obtained from F. Liebermann's Gesetze (No. 1051), C. Gross's Municipal Bibliography (No. 121), and the works of Pollock, Maitland and Vinogradoff.

D.—MISCELLANEOUS MUNIMENTS AND LITERARY MSS.

Many texts and treatises and other compilations of economic interest are to be found in private collections, side by side with documents described in the three preceding sections. Together with these, mention must be made of a large class of literary works, such as Histories, Chronicles, Annals, Devotional and Theological works, and Poetry. These manuscripts, which chiefly occur in public collections, have been fully described and for the most part published. For details reference should be made to C. Gross (No. 84), to the bibliographies appended to the Cambridge History of English Literature, Vols. I. and II., and to the works of Hardy (No. 255), Potthast (No. 80), and Chevalier (No. 78).

The value of Histories, Chronicles and Annals is obvious as supplementing the information to be obtained from the Records: and while they supply to some extent the point-of-view of eyewitnesses of the economic events which they describe, yet the mental attitude of the Middle Ages is still more intimately displayed in the almost casual and incidental references contained in the literature of the period. Few things are more eloquently descriptive of everyday life in the 11th century than Ælfric's Colloquy—a brief reading-book for the beginner in Latin; and the Ancren Riwle, while giving a detailed picture of the life of anchoresses in the 13th century and of their relations with the community around them, gives also, in simile and illustration, many sidelights upon contemporary social life. Much information as to social conditions can be gleaned from theological works, such as Handlyng Synne, Dives et Pauper, Myrc's Instructions, and the works of Wyclif and his followers: while the Philobiblon gives, together with information as to the book trade, details of the life of the clergy and of the clerks at the university. Political poems, Piers the Plowman, and the works of Chaucer and Gower contain a mine of wealth. Contemporary treatises of popular science have a less direct value but are still of service, more particularly the great work of Bartholomaeus Anglicus. Besides affording sidelights upon society, theological works have the peculiar value of setting forth the teaching of the Church in regard to economic matters: the most elaborate work of this kind in English is Dives et Pauper; but any such manual (as, for example, the Ayenbite of Inwyte—a poor translation of the Somme le Roi), treating of the decalogue or the seven deadly sins, will not fail to afford at least a statement of the canonist doctrine of usury.

SECTION II.

ENGLAND'S SISTER KINGDOMS.

The classification adopted in the following succinct description of some of the sources of Scottish, Irish, and Welsh history that may be useful for the study of English Mediæval Economic History is as follows : In the first place the Sources in the case of each of the above countries are grouped as "Official" or "Unofficial" respectively. Secondly, each of these classes is divided into the following sections according to the nature of the documents—(a) Diplomatic Documents, (b) Ministerial Proceedings, (c) Judicial Proceedings, (d) Miscellaneous.

I.—SCOTLAND.

The romantic vicissitudes of the earliest Scottish records, from the reign of Edward I. to the Protectorate, are described in several learned treatises and are well summarised in Livingstone's Guide (No. 163). The reports of the Record Commissioners (1800-1837) and of the English Deputy-Keeper give further information, but it is clear that a great loss of early records has taken place. Those that have survived have been deposited in the Register House, Edinburgh, since 1784. Since 1879 they have been definitely placed in the custody of the Deputy-Clerk Register with a Deputy-Keeper and a Curator of the Historical Department as distinguished from the General Record Office. The following series are those which appear to be the most valuable for mediæval Economic History. It is noticeable, however, that little use has hitherto been made of them in this connection.

The official classification of the Scottish Records, which is practically a proprietary one, is as follows :—

Class 1.—Crown, Parliament, Revenue, and Administration.

None of the records relating to the Regalia, etc., are of early date, though perpetuating ancient traditions. The same remark applies to the records of the Parliament and Council (the Acta Dominorum Concilii being classified with the Judicial records), and the State papers are, of course, later than the mediæval period. However, amongst the contents of a large class of fiscal and administrative records there are series of Crown Rentals (from 1476), Exchequer Rolls (from 1264), Treasurers' Accounts (from 1473).

Class 2.—Judicial Records.

No mediæval records have survived with the exception of the Acts of the Council above referred to. A large number of records for regalities and seignorial courts has been brought in, but these are also of post-mediæval date.

Class 3.—Titles to Land, Dignities and Offices.

One section at least of these important records represents the activities of the mediæval Scottish Chancery, namely the "Registers of the Great Seal." The existing Registers (these Chancery enrolments being in book form as in the continental Chanceries) date from 1306. No mediæval registers of the smaller seals survive, and the statutory enrolments of titles are of considerably later date.

Class 4.—Ecclesiastical and Miscellaneous Records.

The only mediæval documents preserved under this heading are a few miscellaneous accounts, wills, etc., deposited by corporations and private owners for safe custody.

Considerable progress has been made with the publication of the Scottish Records, and the series above-mentioned have been either printed in extenso or fully calendared in the official series of Record Publications issued by the Register House, Edinburgh.

The "Scottish Documents" still preserved in the Public Record Office, London, are briefly described in Scargill-Bird's Guide, but they have been calendared in the Rolls Series (No. 1249), together with extracts from the regular series of English records which refer to Scottish affairs. The Scottish Rolls were printed by the Record Commission (No. 1247). The texts of records relating to the claim of English supremacy, which have been published in the Foedera and other series of documents, are of little economic interest.

With regard to the unofficial manuscript sources, reference may be made to the brief account of the Inventories of Scottish Local Records and MSS. given above (p. 18). Owing to the great destruction of mediæval records in Scotland it is probable that very few materials remain to be discovered in this direction, but owing to the comparative inaccessibility of these documents the surmise cannot be verified here. It may be observed, however, that there is this important distinction between the English and the Scottish national records; that the latter intentionally include certain local records by virtue of Acts of Parliament. In fact, Scotland, following here again the continental practice, had established in the 14th century a General Register of titles to land. In the reign of James VI. (1617) the district Register of Sasines and Hornings and the Notarial Registers were ordered to be transmitted to the Central Registry. Other local records have been transmitted by later Acts of Parliament; but in spite of the advantages of this system (which was advocated for English land-titles in 1619) comparatively few mediæval documents have been transmitted to the Register House at Edinburgh, and many early local records must either have been destroyed or are still outstanding.

II.—IRELAND.

Reports on the Irish records were produced by a separate Record Commission (1810-29), but they remained in the custody of the several Courts, etc., till 1867, when a Public Record Office (Ireland) Act was passed, and a Public Record Office was established at Dublin. The fourth section of the above Act vested in the Master of the Rolls all records of extinct jurisdictions, and under this section the records of various regalities and ecclesiastical courts have been brought in, though, unfortunately, the transfers were very incomplete for mediæval records. Some texts and descriptions of these records will be found in the Reports of the Deputy-Keeper of the Records in Ireland since 1869, and in Gilbert's Facsimiles. Much still remains to be learnt as to the nature of the existing Records at Dublin; but the following series will be found of special value for mediæval economic history: ¹

I. Rolls of Judicial Proceedings.

1. Justiciary Rolls—

- (a) Civil. 1295-1394 (continued as Coram Rege Rolls, 1395-1622-3).
- (b) Criminal (Placita de Corona and Gaol Delivery Rolls.) 1297-1395.
- (c) Recognisances and Bails. 26 Henry VI.—44 Elizabeth.

3. Rolls of Justices de Banco (Common Bench Rolls). 1277-1620.

II. Chancery Rolls.

1. Patent Rolls [Henry II.] to present day.
2. Close Rolls, " " "
3. Statute Rolls, 9 Ed. III. (portion only), 5 Hen. VI. to 1800.

III. Exchequer Rolls.

1. Pipe or Great Rolls.
2. Receipt Rolls.
3. Issue Rolls.
4. Memoranda Rolls.

Inquisitions. (Very few before Henry VII.)

Misc. Rolls (Chancery). (Indexed in Rec. Com. Report, 1819, pp. 518-20. Hardly anything except exemplifications before Henry VII.)

Christ Church Deeds. 1174-1684.

During the mediæval period the Irish records, especially those of the Dublin Exchequer, found their way in considerable numbers to Westminster (cf. Red Book of Exchequer [Rolls] Vol. III., P. 977). These are calendared down to the year 1307, with extracts relating to Ireland from the English series, in the Rolls Calendar (No. 1302), a work of the greatest economic interest. Compared with the Scottish Records, very few texts or calendars of the mediæval records of Ireland have been published officially, and these chiefly for a later period. During recent years a calendar of the Justiciary Rolls dating from 1295 has been begun and will be found of the utmost value. Some attention has been given to the Irish Records in the publications of the Royal Irish Academy and other learned societies, as well as, more recently, by individual scholars.

III.—WALES.

Under the existing arrangement all mediæval Welsh records are actually included in the English series. It is said that these records were formerly kept apart under the press-mark of Wallia, and many Accounts of royal ministers were apparently in the custody of the Auditors of the Land Revenues for Wales. The later Judicial records, from 1543 onwards, were formerly preserved in Welsh repositories, but were transferred to London in 1854. As to their value, see the Report of the Deputy-Keeper of the Public Records, and the essays by R. A. Roberts (No. 166) and H. Hall (No. 167). It should be carefully observed, however, that the mediæval records of the County Palatine of Chester, which are of great economic interest, are no longer regarded as Welsh Records, although those of Flintshire are claimed as such. Some of the Chancery series of Welsh Rolls have been recently calendared in the Record Office Series. No calendars or texts of Welsh Records are published in a Government collection as in the case of the Scottish and Irish Records and "Documents."

The series that will probably be found most useful for mediæval economic history are the following, but with the exception of the summary calendars printed in early Reports of the Deputy-Keeper and a scholarly edition of some Chester "Chamberlain Accounts" none of these have been published :

Minister's Accounts (General Series).

Court Rolls (General Series).

Forest Proceedings (Chester Records).

Quo Warranto Rolls (Chester Records).

Plea Rolls, Assize Rolls, etc. (Chester and Flint).

Welsh Rolls (Chancery).

There are apparently no printed lists or texts of Welsh local Records, but notices of some of those still in the custody of Clerks of the Peace will be found in the Deputy-Keeper's Reports and the Reports on the Public Records in 1800 and 1837. These are probably all of post-mediæval date. The Welsh mediæval literary MSS., including the Ancient Laws and such extents and cartularies as have survived in private custody, have been to some extent printed in the Historical Manuscripts Commission Reports (by Dr. Gwenogvryn Evans), in the Record Commission Series, and by Welsh societies or private scholars. Of late years fine collections of early deeds and other documents have been acquired and arranged by the libraries at Aberystwyth and Cardiff.

SECTION III.

ENGLAND'S CONTINENTAL NEIGHBOURS.

FRANCE.

The French Archives were nationalised at the Revolution, and since that date the whole of the central and local archives have been carefully preserved and systematically arranged and described by a class of professional archivists which has been established by the Governments of every great European country with the exception of our own. The Archives Nationales in Paris represent the proceedings of the Chancery, Council, Parliament, and Ministries. The system of classification will be seen from the Table of Contents of the Etat Sommaire (No. 168).

The Archives Départementales, which represent our own "Local Records of a Public Nature," have been (unlike our own) safely preserved in official custody since the Revolution. For the subject of mediæval Economic History the two divisions of Archives Civiles and Archives Ecclesiastiques, anterior to 1790, should be consulted. The literature of these archives is given in Langlois and Stein, but later information will be found in official Reports and in the special historical periodicals mentioned above (pp. 20-21). In addition to journals like the Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, in which an immense number of pieces are printed or described, mediæval documents preserved in the national and departmental archives are published in the great series of Documents inédits, and to some extent by learned societies. Individual works like that of Fagniez (No. 1464) also give texts of economic interest.

Besides the State archives and the publications derived therefrom, French scholars have been busily engaged for long past in publishing descriptions or texts of documents concerning French history in foreign archives, and many of these, e.g., Publications of the Ecole française at Rome, are of interest for English economic history (No. 1605). Similarly, the edition of the Rôles Gascons (No. 868), by Chas. Bémont, is most important. The texts of Chancery Privy Seals, etc., published by E. Déprez, should not be overlooked, and even the earlier collections of J. Delpit are indispensable to French and English students alike.

The Archives Municipales, Communales, Hospitalières, which represent our own Local Records, not of a public nature, together with certain private collections of Historical Manuscripts, were less fortunate than the State archives, inasmuch as not having been brought into official custody at the Revolution, they were decimated by the vandalism of the early 19th century. Since the middle of that century they have been under the care of a Commission des Archives; but, with the exception of the larger towns, the proportion of mediæval documents that has survived is small. The literature of these archives is given in the work of Langlois and Stein, but many later inventories have been published. Reference should again be made to the work of Fagniez.

Libraries like the Bibliothèque Nationale have a literature of their own, and the provincial libraries are described in Langlois and Stein.

Private collections or Historical Manuscripts (Archives Diverses) are also described in the above work; but, with the exception of the muniments still remaining in the hands of ecclesiastics, they are far less important than similar muniments in England.

BELGIUM (FLANDERS, ETC.).

The state of the Belgium archives has been well described by MM. Gachard (184), Gaillard, and Cuvelier (No. 181), as well as by Langlois and Stein (No. 191), and their system is largely based on the French. In fact, the archives of Belgium were systematised during the French occupation. Since 1831 there have been central archives at Brussels (Archives Générales du Royaume) and eight or nine provincial repositories (Archives de l'état dans les provinces) under the supervision of the chief archivist at Brussels. The Belgium State archives are rich in mediæval charters or cartularies and accounts, and these have been extensively printed by the Brussels Academy and to some extent by learned societies or individual scholars. The pieces printed by Varenbergh (No. 2071) are valuable for economic history, but most of these and the materials for the mediæval cloth trade are found in the communal archives. In the central archives at Brussels, however, as well as in some local archives, many unpublished mediæval documents (chiefly accounts, registers, and cartularies) may be found which might throw light on several obscure aspects of mediæval economic history.

In addition to inventories and a few texts edited by earlier archivists, the most important publications from the Belgian archives have been included in the several series produced by the Commission royale d'Histoire attached to the Académie royale de Belgique, e.g., the Documents inédits relatifs à l'histoire de Belgique. Even more important for economic history are the publications of the Commission royale pour la publication des anciennes Coutumes Lois et Ordonnances de la Belgique, though few of the existing codes are dated in the mediæval period. Some texts have been published from the local archives by historical societies as well as in the historical reviews and other periodicals. A few titles are given below, and others will be found in the directories cited elsewhere (No. 196).

The Local Records of the southern provinces of the mediæval Low Countries are chiefly represented by the municipal and communal archives of Bruges, Ghent, Ypres, and other cities and towns, the general nature of which is described in the works of MM. Langlois and Stein, Potter and Broekaert, Cuvelier, and others. In Belgium, as in other Continental States, the important collections of municipal archives are looked after by expert archivists. One result of this interest is the preparation of inventories of the archives, many of which are printed. Again, the local archives are an object of solicitude to the several State or academic Commissions which direct the official publications of the nation. Besides the municipal archives there are many valuable documents to be found amongst the "Archives diverses," namely, the historical manuscripts in the possession of the churches, convents, notaries and families. These, the "Petites Archives," as they have been called, are for the most part of post-mediæval date, but many cartularies and other muniments have been published or described by the Brussels Academy and local historical societies, whilst still more remain to be dealt with.

It may be remarked here that the taste for publishing chronicles has taught historians the value of charters, accounts, and other formal documents as incidental sources of historical information. It should also be noted that there is much in common between the local historical sources of the Low Countries and the North of France, whilst many Flemish documents may be found in Paris.

NETHERLANDS (THE LOW COUNTRIES).

The State Archives of the Netherlands, like those of Belgium and France, are primarily classified according to the great political changes in the national constitution at the close of the 18th and during the first part of the 19th century. Thus the earliest series of State documents is that prior to 1796, and this is followed by the documents accruing during the French occupation (1796-1814), archives of the united kingdom of Holland and Belgium (1814-1830), and the purely Dutch archives since the revolution of 1830. The Belgian archives are divided into three similar epochs, with the difference of date between 1794 and 1796, whereas the French archives, as we have seen, are simply divided as anterior or posterior to the year 1790.

The mediæval value of the Dutch Archives is perhaps scarcely as great as those of Belgium. The General National Archives (Algemeen Rijks archief) at the Hague, also include the provincial archives for South Holland, those for North Holland being preserved at Haarlem. The remaining provinces also possess well-equipped State archives (Rijks-archieven). The mediæval contents of these archives have not been exhaustively published or described, except in the case of Utrecht. At the same time it should be noted that the documents most interesting for English economic history are to be found in the municipal archives of the Netherlands, although in some cases these are practically in the same custody as the State archives.

The Municipal Archives (Gemeente-Archief) are to be found in the cities and principal towns of every province. They are usually distinguished as "old" (oude) and "new" (nieuwe) archives respectively, the former being transformed to a public repository and the latter remaining in the custody of the town clerk (sekretaris).

There are also separate archives relating to the Waterways (Waterschaps-Archieven), but these are comparatively modern and, like those of our own Commissioners of Sewers, are mostly in the hands of local authorities. Two other noticeable collections in municipal archives may be regarded as negligible for our present purpose. These are the Archives of the Vendue (Veender-y-archieven), which are also modern, and have only survived in a few provinces) and the Church Books. The latter include the Registers of Births, etc., and other administrative archives, the charters, registers, and more ancient documents having been incorporated for the most part with the State or municipal archives.

A good description of the early sources is given in P. J. Blok's "History" (Appendix), but the Reports (Verslagen) of Professors Blok and Brugmans on the English archives, so far as they concern the history of the Low Countries, are unfortunately chiefly confined to the post-mediæval period, though the new State Commission for Publications has published some useful reports on mediæval Baltic and Italian archives. (No. 210).

The position of the local archives, other than those of an official nature, in the Netherlands closely resembles that of the Belgian collections, though the former are more numerous and important than the latter. The archives of the Protestant Churches and the contents of the public libraries are useless for our subject, and those of private families are comparatively rare.

The archives of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg are of considerable extent, and have been described in the Missions des Archives (1888). Texts have been published by the Grand-ducal Institute of Luxembourg.

GERMANY, ETC. (THE MEDIÆVAL EMPIRE).

The State archives (Staatsarchive) are numerous, ranging from eighteen, in Prussia, down to a single repository. The typical collection is described as "Royal," "Princely," "Ducal," etc., and is essentially "secret" (Geheimes archiv), besides often containing a section which concerns the reigning house (Hausarchiv). In Bavaria there are "Circuit" archives (Kreisarchiv), and in Alsace-Lorraine "District" archives (Bezirkarchiv). The terms "national," "general," and "central" also occur. In the free cities of Hamburg, Bremen, and Lübeck, and in many of the German States, there are "state" archives.

Perhaps more local interest has been taken in the archives of the Rhine cities than in those of other districts of the Empire, and these are also valuable for the Hanseatic trade, together with the archives of the free cities and certain Prussian collections, particularly Stettin, Dantzic, Osnabrück, Königsberg, and Magdeburg. The archives of Baden are interesting for agrarian history.

During recent years much attention has been given to the science of archives in Germany and Austria-Hungary, and great progress has been made in this direction. On the other hand, the fact remains that Burkhardt's Hand-und-adressbuch (No. 195) has not been revised since 1887, and foreign students are glad to have access to the lists published by Hettler (Nos. 196-199) although they have no pretensions to scholarship. At the same time it should be noted that the great majority of the German state archives are later than the mediæval period, with the exception of those of the free cities. In any case the official literature of the state Archives is very meagre for that period, nor (with the following exceptions) are the publications of local archives of particular interest for English mediæval history.

The German cities are rich in diplomatic documents of early date, and many texts of these (Urkundenbücher) have been published. The archives of the old cities of the Hanseatic League are particularly valuable. Amongst the "Stadt-archive," the "Rathsbücher" (Council registers) and "Schuldbriefe" (bonds, etc.) should be noticed.

Some of the states or cities publish inventories or transactions for their archives ; but for the most part information must be sought for in the publications mentioned above, and in local journals or academies. The same remark applies to the archives of Austria-Hungary and Switzerland in respect of early economic subjects. As in England, the extensive and scholarly publications of the Governments or of royal commissions and learned societies are chiefly concerned with political and constitutional subjects. Some collections and periodicals of special interest are given below.

ITALY (ITALIAN STATES).

There are nearly a score of separate Archives of State (Archivio di Stato), of which those at Venice, Milan, Genoa, Pisa, Lucca, Florence, and Naples are perhaps the most important for English mediæval economic history.

For the Vatican Archives there is, as we have seen, a distinct and cosmopolitan literature. For the earlier history, see H. Bresslau's "Urkundenlehre."

It is naturally a question for careful consideration whether English students would find it worth while to make independent researches in the Vatican and Venetian archives, in view of the work that is being carried on there by the Record Office agents. At the same time the official transcripts (the originals of the published calendars) have been made as opportunity served, and without any special interest in economic subjects. The notices of the condottieri and English archers, to be found in the Venetian calendar, are supplemented from the Archives of Milan in a recent volume. In the case of the Tuscan Archives much more has been published by the historical Commissions, as well as by private enterprise, and texts of the early Italian Laws and Charters are given in the series of Monumenta Storiæ Patriæ. There is also an extensive foreign literature which is especially valuable for the mercantile relations of the Italian cities with other mediæval states.

The communal archives are of somewhat later date. The municipal archives, both printed and in manuscript, are partially described in Manzoni's Bibliografia dei Municipii (1876-92). In some cases the municipal archives are placed in the civic Museum, as at Padua. However, the Italian local records are of less importance for our subject than the State Archives, as the chief cities were formerly independent states.

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL (THE PENINSULAR KINGDOMS).

Although a system of centralisation has prevailed for more than a century (facilitated by the proprietary interest of the Crown in the chief archives, libraries, and museums), the custody of these is still for the most part associated with the old kingdoms or provinces of Castille and Leon, Aragon (including Valencia and Catalonia), Galicia, Navarre, and Portugal. Thus, in addition to the Archivo General Central outside Madrid and the other well-known Castilian repositories at Seville and Simancas, archives are still preserved at Barcelona (Aragon), Valencia, Pampeluna (Navarre), Galicia, and Palma (Majorca); whilst the royal archives of Portugal are mainly preserved at Lisbon. It has been observed (above, p. 27) that inventories of these collections have only been partially printed, and chiefly in periodical publications. Various descriptive accounts of the same have been published by native or foreign antiquaries. Reference should also be made to the publications of the Royal Academies and Learned Societies, as well as to certain Periodical Publications and other Collections noted below.

In addition to these Royal and Departmental Archives, extensive collections of historical MSS. may be found in the several royal libraries of Madrid, as well as in the possession of the Cathedral Churches, Cities, Universities, Royal Academies, and Learned Societies of Spain and Portugal. Catalogues of some of these libraries have been published, and further information may be found in the Annuario (1881, etc.) and the various Boletins of the learned institutions.*

DENMARK, NORWAY AND SWEDEN.

The Scandinavian kingdoms have so many affinities in respect of history, constitution, language and literature, and these resemblances have reacted so strongly on their respective archives and historical studies, that it will be more convenient to give a brief description of their common features of interest for English students.

In each kingdom there are central or metropolitan archives, provincial archives (centralised in a few repositories), and public or private collections in the possession of libraries, corporations, and learned societies or individuals.

Thus for Denmark, besides the Rigsarkiv in Copenhagen, there are three provincial depots at Copenhagen, Odensee, and Viborg, with the contents of the private collections alluded to above. In Christiania, and in Stockholm, there is a Rigsarchiv, and there are provincial state archives and private collections in both Norway and Sweden, those of the latter country being especially valuable. Besides the archivistic periodicals mentioned above (p. 29) each of the Scandinavian kingdoms has published a Diplomataria of great interest for mediæval history (p. 178), whilst the historical and antiquarian societies publish the results of many original researches in archives. At the same time the great bulk of the state archives being later than the mediæval period, many historical publications do not concern us here.

Although the Scandinavian kingdom of Norway was more in evidence to English traders and chroniclers from the 12th to the 14th centuries, Denmark plays an important part in connexion with the Hanseatic League from the end of the 14th century.

Even more important for English students are the recent researches of Professor Alexander Bugge as to the relations between the Celtic, Norman, and Scandinavian inhabitants of Ireland before the 13th century and the trade relations between England and Scotland, and Norway from the 12th to the 15th century. The results of the latter investigations have partly appeared in the Diplomatarium Norvegicum, and show that many series of English Public Records throw light on these obscure trade relations. The muniments of the city of London are disappointing for this subject, but some amends are made by those of King's Lynn and other out-ports.
